while a sleek desk and chair create a functional work-space. Consider opting for furniture with interesting shapes or textures to add visual interest to the space.

Incorporate soft textiles such as cushions, throws, and rugs to make the corner feel cosy and inviting. Choose fabrics that complement your existing colour scheme and add layers for texture and dimension.

Besides soft furnishings, introduce potted plants or hanging planters to your corner to infuse it with natural beauty. They not only add freshness and vitality to a space but also contribute to its visual appeal. Choose low-maintenance varieties that thrive in indoor conditions, such as pothos, snake plants, or ferns, and place them strategically to brighten up the space.

"To create pretty corners that foster a profound connection with nature and promote well-being, integrate biophilic design principles into your spaces. This involves incorporating indoor plants, designing landscaped terraces, and maximising natural light infusion through strategic facade design," says, Shubhra Dahiya, partner at another noted interiors and architecture design brand.

Displaying artwork, photographs, or decorative objects is yet another excellent way to personalise your corner and showcase your style. Create a gallery wall with framed prints or hang a statement piece as a focal point. Mix and match different textures, shapes, and sizes to add visual interest, and don't be afraid to experiment with unconventional arrangements.

Good lighting is essential for creating ambience and highlighting your corner's features. Incorporate a mix of overhead lighting, task lighting, and ambient lighting to achieve the desired effect. Consider adding a floor lamp or a table lamp with a soft, warm glow to create a cosy atmosphere conducive to relaxation or productivity.

Well-planned and aesthetically pleasing modern interior spaces are fast catching up with décor trends. They are neat, spacious, and reflect personalities.

Setting up home interiors with the right design elements takes effort and creativity. Today, urban homes are a mix of worldly patterns, pops of colours, natural textures, and lots of plants. They reflect an aesthetic that is welcoming and grabs the attention of all.

One often-overlooked area that holds great potential for adding charm and personality to your home is the corners. Whether it is a cosy reading nook, a botanical oasis, or a display of cherished mementos, creating pretty corners can enhance the overall ambience of your home.

"From soothing tones like beige and taupe to bold blues and energetic pinks, the right palette can breathe life into any space. Soft yellow lighting creates a serene retreat, while neon LED hues offer a playful twist," shares, Rachna

Agarwal, founder and design ideator of a prominent architectural and interior design firm.

Adding artefacts is one of the most inexpensive ways to spruce up an interior space. Artificial floral décor can be used to complement a theme. "Art has the power to express your personality and set the mood in any room. It can be used to bring life to your corners," says, Kuntal Vyas Aggarwal, founder and design head of a leading interiors and architecture design studio.

To create picture-perfect corners that will enhance the overall aura of interiors, select furniture pieces that fit the scale of your corner while complementing the existing décor. A comfortable armchair paired with a small side table makes for an inviting reading corner.

Plants not only add freshness and vitality to an interior space but also contribute to its visual appeal
